Were you aware, you who have whiled away many delightful hours over the luxuriantly appointed luncheon tables of your friends, that the pretty custom was originated by American women?

And that to them is due the credit for the instigation of those friendly moments prompted by these formal and informal gatherings?

Unlike our English cousins, American women have found a form of sincere pleasure in each other's society.

The ladies of France bid their friends to share their "dejeuners a la fourchette," and the ladies of England are ever loyal to their age-old five o'clock tea, which is being supplemented to recent bridge afternoons, but the feminine luncheon, with its graceful accessories of elaborate floral, crystal, and silver appointments, is distinctly American.

Here, at her own table, is where a capable hostess usually radiates hospitality, exhibiting not only the extent of her natural skill and originality in her efforts for artistic effect, but a trifle more, perhaps, of her real unveiled character, than at any of the more restricted functions.

Owing to the severity and discomfort of closed rooms in the tropics, there seems to be a marked aversion in Honolulu to the drawn shades and candelabra so effective in the more tempting climates, where every prettiness is introduced for a more delectable presentation.

Nothing so instinctively inspires wit and repartee like a handsomely appointed dining-room, softly illuminated with rose-tinted shades and voluptuously resplendent in its scintillation of crystal and rare breath of hot-house flowers.

Because in a rose light all women are delicately lovely, and in the realization of her security of physical charm a woman is dull indeed if gratifying conversation be not forthcoming.

The luncheons of old Hawaii were characterized by a rural simplicity which has gradually been replaced by more and more formality.

Whether the services people resident in the islands who are identified with local society, and who have effected a certain dress reform, be responsible for the formality which has come into vogue, is still a question, but that a mild rivalry between the two sets is effecting more elaborate occasions is indisputable.

And whether the reform be acceptable to the older residents, who claim precedence for the older order, is a matter for individual preference to decide.

It is like the story of Dupre and the beggar whom he noticed in barefoot poverty seated in dejection upon his front stairs and to whom, in the face of his frugal wife's protestations, he bequeathed his best pair of shoes.

Looking out of his window the next day and seeing the beggar still in his bare feet, he approached him and inquired the reason, and asked what he had done with the nice new shoes.

"Well, excellency," replied the beggar looking up, "I sold them. Because if I were to wear them nobody would give me a thing!"

SOCIAL NEWS OF THE DAY.

Mr. and Mrs. George Rodiek and children, Mrs. Neumann and Miss Tilly Neumann have taken the McInerney cottage at Diamond Head, where they will reside till August 1.

A very large assembly of society folk attended the polo match at Moanalua on Tuesday afternoon, the field being packed solidly with army wagons and automobiles.

Among other parties was that of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Halstead.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Dillingham entertained in their party Mrs. Luther Severance of Hilo and Mrs. Walter Francis Dillingham, while Mrs. William Williamson, Mr. Dondero and Mr. Oliver Lansing formed another group in Mrs. Williamson's machine.

Mr. Alfred Wall's guests were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smith and Mr. Pinkham and Mr. J. Harris MacKenzie entertained Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Waterhouse, Miss Grace Carroll and Mr. Hare.

Mr. Cushman Carter is expected home in the Sierra tomorrow morning after a delightful tour of the Eastern states.

Master Charles Stevens, the son of Paymaster and Mrs. H. E. Stevens of the navy, has sent out invitations for a chaffing dish supper at which he will entertain next Saturday evening.

The beautiful bungalow in College Hills recently occupied by Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Raven, has been sold to Mr. and Mrs. A. Wirtz, who will occupy it the first of next week.

Mr. Sam Walker is being warmly welcomed home after a two months' tour of the Orient. Mr. Walker returned last Friday from the Siberia.

Mr. J. Harris MacKenzie entertained at a chowder supper after the polo game on Tuesday, at his rustic home at the head of Moana valley.

Mr. MacKenzie's home is one of the most beautiful on Oahu and his gardens are far famed.

The supper table was gracefully arranged, a basket of roses occupying the center. The place cards were hand-painted scenes.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Gus Schumann, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Whitehouse, Miss Grace Carroll, Mr. Hare and Mr. J. Harris MacKenzie.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McChesney entertained informally at a very charming dinner party on Sunday evening at their home on Kewalo street and Wilber avenue.

The table was daintily arrayed with cut flowers and ferns, and the guest cards were hand-painted confections. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. John F. Bowler, Miss Anna O'Brien of San Francisco, Miss Gwendolyn Tavitt and Captain and Mrs. Henry Berger.

Mrs. J. W. Waldron has issued about forty invitations to a dancing party at which she will entertain on Wednesday evening of next week at her home in Nuuanu valley, in honor of her sister, Miss Pauline Schaefer.

A very enjoyable picnic party was given on Tuesday at the beach home of Mr. and Mrs. Marston Campbell at Kahala.

The party, comprising about thirty people and their families, left town early, motoring to the beach, where bridge, swimming and surfing occupied the morning and afternoon hours, interspersed by a delicious picnic luncheon served in a large marquee which had been erected on the lawn.

The guests later motored back to town in time for dinner.

Among those in the party were Mrs. Zumwalter, Mrs. Ella Carpenter, Dr. and Mrs. Philip Frear, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lyser, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frazier, Mrs. St. C. Sayres, Mr. and Mrs. Joan Drew, Mr. and Mrs. L. Davis, Mr. J. M. Young, Mrs. Tackabury, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Blake, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Bowen, Mrs. Latzin, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. A. Gartenberg.

Mr. and Mrs. James O. Dougherty and Dr. and Mrs. Clifford B. High were entertained last week-end by Mr. and Mrs. J. Morton Riggs at the McInerney cottage at Waikeke, where they have been living for the past month.

Mrs. Turner of Fort Ruger entertained yesterday afternoon at a Fourth of July card party at her artistic quarters at the military post, when three tables of six-handed euchre were contested.

National flags and pennants were very effectively draped about the rooms to suggest the nature of the occasion and quantities of bright red carnations were in evidence, caught with King blue satin bows.

Several side tables were covered by silk cloths, evolved in the national colors, and the ices were surmounted by tiny silk American flags.

The bon bons were all of the national tints and the favors, filled with chocolates, were large red firecrackers tied with baby ribbon bows in red, white and blue.

The score for each table was presented on a large red firecracker tied with red, white and blue, on which gold stars were painted.

The largest number of stars won the prizes.

The first and second prizes were represented in the form of hand-made, exquisitely dainty boudoir aprons for fancy work, of flowered silk elaborately trimmed with self-toned ribbons and lace.

These were presented to Mrs. Macomb and Mrs. William H. Winters, respectively.

To Miss Kuteman fell the consolation, a late popular novel.

Those present at this very delightful afternoon of cards were Mrs. Montgomery Macomb, Mrs. Walter Cleveland Cowles, Mrs. Edward Julius Timberlake, Mrs. William H. Winters, Mrs. Roy Francis Smith, Miss Kuteman, Mrs. Arthur Marx, Miss Kathryn Stephens, Mrs. F. B. Edwards, Mrs. W. H. Smith, Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. Joseph Sheedy, Mrs. W. G. Cox, Mrs. Widdifield, Mrs. E. H. Cooke, Mrs. Johnston, Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Putnam.

U. S. revenue cutter Thetis will be pleased to learn that the trim little vessel reported her safe arrival at Valdez, Alaska, on July Fourth. The Thetis will cruise about the Alaskan coast before returning to Honolulu, early in October.

Miss Bernice Herrell of Bakersfield, Cal., has married Mr. Wm. F. Chipman of Alameda. The latter is a cousin of Mrs. Nelson B. Lansing of this city. The wedding tour will include Honolulu.

Mrs. E. M. Kelly of Pasadena is at present the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Bryant Cooper at their home in Paunoi.

Mrs. Kelly has many friends in Honolulu who have all been anxious to entertain her, and this charming society matron is dividing her time between them.

Mrs. Kelly visited the islands eight or nine years ago when her daughter, Mrs. C. C. Perkins, lived here.

Mrs. Andrew Fuller, Mrs. A. M. Brown and others prominent in society have entertained for Mrs. Kelly during her visit.

EXAMINER, June 28.—For fourteen days Walter Matson, son of Captain William Matson, the wealthy shipowner, and brother of Miss Lurline Matson, the well-known society belle, has been burdened in mind in his efforts to maintain the secrecy of his marriage that was quietly solemnized in St. Agnes' Church June 14th. His bride was Miss Frances Mur-
